Children's Literature:

Additional easy reading fish books are found in Volume 1 of the Sea Week Curriculum Series.

Adkins, Jan. The Craft of Sail. Illustrated by author, Walker & Co., NY., 1973. 64 p.

Aesthetically pleasing, carefully detailed study of sailing vessels that includes charts that show various kinds of sails, knots, chart symbols, as well as engineering principles written and illustrated so even the youngest reader can understand.

Altman, Margery. Jaws 2 Sharks: Everything That's Good and Bad About Them. Illustrated by Tony Tallarico, Grossett & Dunlap, NY, 1978. 62 p.

Questions asked by some Connecticut high school students together with answers and line drawings to color.

Angel, Heather. The World of a Stream. Illustrated with photographs and line drawings. Faber and Faber, Salem, NH, 1976. 128 p.

An information book about the plants and animals which live in streams.

Boudreau, Norman (ed.). Old Fourlegs, a 'Living Fossil'. National Museums of Canada, Ottawa, Canada K1A 0M8, 1976. 8 p.

Background information and directions for making a paper sculpture of an ancient fish, the coelacanth. Text and directions are in both English and French.

Buehr, Walter. Sea Monsters. Illustrated by the author. Archway Paperbacks, Simon & Schuster, NY, 1970. 113 p.

An information book written as literature which serves as a good starting point for children interested in studying sea creatures. Gives the history of "monster" sightings from the middle ages through the Loch Ness Monster. An honest interpretation of monsters as they have been perceived by people since earliest times.

Bernard, Christine. The Book of Fantastic Boats. Illustrated by Roy Coombs. Golden Press, 1974. 30 p.

Magnificent color plates dominate each page. The brief text contains facts and trivia to intrigue students. The picture of each boat is captioned with date, country of origin, size and prominent feature or use.

Burton, Maurice. The Life of Fishes. Golden Press, NY, 1974. 62 p.

Discusses fishes from the earliest known and illustrates them with full color drawings. Includes interesting descriptions of how a paleontologist works, the results of pollution, and how to set up and maintain an aquarium. Discusses evolution, life cycles, anatomy, food chains and pyramids.

Bleeker, Sonia. The Sea Hunters - Indians of the Northwest Coast. Illustrated by Althea Karr. William Morrow & Company, NY, 1951. 159 p.

Effectively portrays the life of the Northwest Coast Indians before the coming of the white man. Subjects range from salmon fishing to food preservation and sea otter, sea lion, seal, deer and bear hunting. Illustrations are numerous and depict the regional area and customs.

Blumberg, Roda. Sharks. Franklin Watts, Inc., N.Y., 1976.

Tells about sharks and rays and how they hear, see, mate, and eat. Scary photographs, exciting text.

Brindze, Ruth. The Rise and Fall of the Seas: The Story of Tides. Illustrated by Felix Cooper. Harcourt, Brace & World, Inc., 1964. 91 p.

Good introduction to causes, effects, dangers, and uses of tides. Illustrated with black-and-white photographs and diagrams.

Buck, Margaret Waring. In Ponds and Streams. Abingdon Press, 1955. 77 p.

A specialized reference book giving an overview of many facets of pond and stream life. Different types of plants, worms, snails, insects, fishes, mammals, etc., are illustrated and discussed. Specifically deals with the northeastern part of the U.S., but is still useful for Alaskans.

Burger, Carl. All About Fish. Random House, N.Y., 1960. 139 p.

Very interesting and well written text which begins by comparing fish with other living creatures. Discusses fish origins; serpents and monsters; and fish oddities. Includes both salt and fresh water fish. Describes commercial and sport fishing.

Clemons, Elizabeth. Waves, Tides and Currents. Illustrated with maps, diagrams and photographs. Alfred A. Knopf, NY, 1967. 112 p.

Explains what a tide is and accurately describes the difference between an ebb tide and flood tides; what causes the tides; and the effect of currents in the oceans.

Cole, Joanna and Jerome Wexler. A Fish Hatches. Wm. Morrow & Co., N.Y., 1978. 39 p.

Photographically illustrated description of life of a hatchery trout from egg onward. Discusses importance of scales, gills, sensory organs and explains in detail how a fish swims.

Cole, William. The Sea, Ships and Sailors. Illustrated by Robin Jacques. Viking, NY, 1967. 236 p.

A Grant collection of marine poetry and songs with the rhythm of the men working on the ships, the intrigue of the strange lands they visit and the exciting adventures they have.

Cousteau, Jacques. A Sea of Legends: Inspiration From the Sea. World Publishing, NY, 1973. 144 p.

A collection of sea legends from our earliest history in a lovely, oversized book. Part of "The Ocean World of Jacques Cousteau." Beautifully illustrated with prints, full-color photographs, and drawings.

Cousteau, J-Y. and P. Cousteau. The Shark: Splendid Savage of the Sea. Doubleday, 1970.

Another entertaining book by the French team that originated and has so effectively publicized SCUBA. Consists primarily of anecdotes, but has the excellent photos and poetic prose typical of the Cousteau clan.

Figdor, George and B. Figdor. Salmon Fishing. George Figdor, Box 612, Haines, Alaska 99827. 48 p.

Excellent photographic illustrations and creative text which explains what is involved in commercial salmon fishing.

Fletcher, Alan Mark. Fishes and Their Young. Illustrated by Allan Eitzen. Addison-Wesley, 1974. 46 p.

Tells how fish vary enormously in the amount of care they give to their young - from none at all to a considerable degree of protection. Covers many kinds of fish with good illustrations.

Fletcher, Alan Mark. Fishes Dangerous to Man. Illustrated by Jane Teiko Oka and Willi Baum. Addison-Wesley, 1969.

Categorizes fishes dangerous to man into those which shock, bite, sting, or are poisonous to eat. Short descriptive stories of persons who have had close calls with these frightening animals are followed by informational passages. Black-and-white illustrations are dramatic and well designed.

Fletcher, Alan Mark. Fishes that Hide. Illustrated by Jean Day Zallinger. Addison-Wesley, 1973.

Explains how fish are camouflaged to obtain food or escape enemies by various shapes and markings and by coloring, transparency, counter-shading, or changing colors.

Fletcher, Alan Mark. Fishes that Travel. Illustrated by Michael Eagle. Addison-Wesley, 1971. 48 p.

Describes the migration of some species of fish and unusual methods of locomotion of others, including flying fish and fish which travel on land.

Garret, Maxwell R. The Science-Hobby Book of Boating. Lerner Publications, 1974. 55 p.

Gives basic instructions for canoeing, rowing, sailing and power boating in this clearly-written and profusely-illustrated book. Emphasizes safety and techniques. Includes information on navigational aids, buoys, running lights, signaling and nautical "rules of the road."

Goetz, Delia. Lakes. William Morrow and Co., N.Y., 1973. 66 p.

Focuses on various aspects of lakes: their origins, life cycles, and plants and animals associated with them. Mentions people's use of lakes thousands of years ago and today, including pollution. Soft greenish and charcoal colored illustrations heighten the attraction of the text.

Goetz, Delia. Rivers. Illustrated by John Kaufmann. Wm. Morrow & Co., 1969. 63 p.

An exploratory book about the rivers of the world. Discusses history as well as how they are formed. Mentions some famous rivers and points out the need for river conservation and water pollution controls. Illustrated with black-and-white drawings.

Gracza, Margaret. The Ship and the Sea in Art. Designed by Robert Clark Nelson. Lerner Publications Co., 1969. 64 p.

Covers ships and the sea in art through the ages, from Egyptian bas-relief of boats on the Nile to Jacques Lipschitz' cubist Sailor with Guitar. Combines art appreciation with an introduction to nautical terminology and history.

Harris, Christie. Once Upon a Totem. Atheneum, New York, 1973. 195 p.

Includes the story "The Prince who was Taken Away by the Salmon," a tale about the disappearance and return of salmon to rivers of the Northwest.

Hausamnn, Leon A. Beginners' Guide to Fresh-Water Life. G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1950. 128 p.

Brief descriptions of freshwater critters accompanied by black-and-white line drawings.

Higgins, Art. Inside an Alaskan Cannery. Art Higgins, Juneau, Alaska (printed by Alaska Litho), 1972. Approximately 50 p.

Describes salmon and crab cannery processing in Alaska with a series of pen and ink drawings and brief text.

Holling, Holling Clancy. Paddle-to-the-Sea. Houghton Mifflin Co., 1941.

An excellent book about the flow of water from the snow on a mountain-top to salt water in the ocean. Traces the voyage of a canoe carved by a young Indian boy from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean. Wonderful text and illustrations.

Jacobsen, Daniel. The Fishermen. Franklin Watts, N.Y., 1975. 87 p.

Describes life, customs, history of Indians of America's Northwest coast with emphasis on the Tlingit. Includes information on land claims and Tlingit life today.

Kipling, Rudyard. Captains Courageous. Doubleday, NY, 1897. 322 p.

Classic sea adventure filled with sea imagery. Written when Kipling was living in the United States.

Latham, Jean Lee. Carry On, Mr. Bowditch. Illustrated by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. Houghton Mifflin, Boston, 1955. 251 p.

In a true sea adventure describes Nathaniel Bowditch life in Salem in the 1700s. Through hard work and much study, he gets to sail with a crew. He discovers new ways of navigation, and he is, in all ways, a model to emulate.

Liss, Howard. Fishing Talk for Beginners. Illustrated by Leonard Cole. Julian Messner, New York. 1978. 96 p.

Detailed information in dictionary form about various aspects of sport fishing. Includes drawings showing spinning, surf casting and fly fishing and their associated lures. Explains types of fish and how to measure them.

Matteson, George. Draggermen: Fishing on Georges Bank. Four Winds Press, NY, 1979. 138 p.

Describes a stern trawler and the men who fish from her on Georges Bank off the New England coast. Matteson accompanied the crew on an actual voyage and tells of their work with care, craft and compassion. The four man crew works as a team; each knows exactly what his task is, and the captain works as hard as the men; profits are shared identically. Tells how they find where the fish are, how they make the catch, what things can go wrong when the net is dragging the bottom, how the fish are separated and the deck cleaned.

MacGregor, Ellen. Miss Pickerell Goes Undersea. Illustrated by Paul Galdone. McGraw-Hill Book Co., N.Y., 1953. 125 p.

Describes sonar, atomic-powered submarines, and under-the-sea salvaging in a fun way. The unpredictable Miss Pickerell uses these things in the recovery of her priceless Mars rocks that were being transported on a ship that sank.

MacGregor, Ellen and Dora Pantell. Miss Pickerell Harvests the Sea. Illustrated by Charles Geer. McGraw-Hill, NY, 1968. 144 p.

Tells about how Miss Pickerell's friend opens a sea diner and his menu depends on seaweed, algae and other things from his ocean farm. When it stops producing, Miss Pickerell helps solve the mystery.

McGovern, Ann. Sharks. Illustrated by Murray Tinkelman. Four Winds Press, N.Y., 1976. 47 p.

Presents a great deal of information with question-answer format and attractive black and white illustrations.

Mundie, Rosemary and Colin. The Story of the Sailing Ship. Exeter Books, New York, 1975. 152 p.

Exquisitely illustrated large format book which details sailing ships round the world from the past and present.

Nordhoff, Charles and James Normal Hall. Mutiny on the Bounty. Little, Brown, Boston, 1960 (reprint 1932 ed.). 384 p.

Details the famous late 18th Century mutiny.

Onmanney, F.D. The Fishes. Time-Life Books, NY, 1967. 128 p.

A marvelous, descriptive text with pictures of fish, their life habits and how food is harvested from the oceans. Illustrated with full color photographs, maps and drawings.

Oxford Scientific Films. The Stickleback Cycle. Photographs by David Thompson. G.P. Putnam's Sons, N.Y., 1979. 27 p.

Explains the life cycle of the stickleback with a short introductory text and clear, outstanding close-up photos.

Parnall, Peter. The Great Fish. Illustrated by the author. Doubleday, NY, 1973, n. pag.

Charlie is an Indian boy who listens to his grandfather's stories about how their land developed. One of the best is about the salmon that always returns to the land of the Indians to spawn. Has a strong ecology statement. Beautifully illustrated in black and white.

Paul, Frances Lackey. Kahtahah. Illustrated by Rie Munoz. Alaska Northwest Publishing Co., Anchorage, Alaska, 1976. 109 p.

Originally written in 1938 for a fourth-grade class. Based on the real life of a 19th century Tlingit girl. Includes several sea-related legends, as well as information on traditional fishing. Wonderful illustrations.

Peck, Christopher. The Scholastic Fun Fact Book of Underwater Worlds. Scholastic Book Services, N.Y., 1977. 32 p.

Packed with facts, full-color illustrations, and diagrams of sea creatures and underwater exploration voyages.

Pedersen, Elsa. Alaska Harvest. Illustrated by Kurt Werth. Abbingon Press, N.Y., 1960. 192 p. Out of print (check your library).

Story of a family's life on a crab boat in Kachemak Bay. High catches cause many others to accuse them of pirating. The resulting bravery and determination prove their honesty, gain their respect in Seldovia, and earn them a house for their mom's return from the hospital.

_____. Cook Inlet Decision. Illustrated by Walter Ferro, Atheneum, N.Y., 1963. 203 p. Out of print (check your library).

Story of Gregor, an orphaned half Norwegian, half Aleut teenager who tries his luck as an independent fisherman in Cook Inlet. Action packed events give birth to thoughtful reflections by Gregory, who changes considerably through his experiences.

_____. Fisherman's Choice. Illustrated by Alvin Smith. Atheneum, N.Y., 1964. 182 p. Out of print (check your library).

Story of Dave Moffitt's job on a crab boat. Mystery, intrigue, and constant adventure that lead to Dave growing from a boy to a man.

_____. Petticoat Fisherman. Atheneum, N.Y., 1969. 231 p. Out of print (check your library).

Alaskan fishing out of Seldovia forms part of a girl's growing from teenager to adult.

Phleger, Fred. Red Tag Comes Back. Illustrated by Arnold Lobel. Harper & Row, N.Y., 1961. 64 p.

Teaches the life cycle of a salmon with a simple story line.

Pringle Lawrence. This is a River: Exploring an Ecosystem. Macmillian Pub. Co., Inc., 1972. 55 p.

Presents the river as a flowing-water ecosystem. Of note are drawings of stream animals found under a stone, a diagram showing a food web, and another drawing illustrating types of life present in the water in relation to the amount and location of industrial pollution.

Reekie, Isabel M. Red Paddle. Illustrated by Dennis Hutchins. Mitchell Press, Vancouver, 1968. 99 p.

Partially fiction, set among real people in a real setting, this tells of Dave's building a dugout canoe on Burrard Inlet in British Columbia before Vancouver became incorporated as a city.

Reid, George K. Pond Life. Golden Press, N.Y., 1967. 150 p.

The best simplified guide to life in and around ponds and lakes. Packed with color drawings. One of the Golden Nature Series.

Selsam, Millicent E. and Joyce Hunt. A First Look at Fish. Walker Publishing Co., N.Y., 1972. 32 p.

A simple look at what a fish is. Discusses unique structures and the diversity of shapes and sizes among fishes.

_____. A First Look at Sharks. Illustrated by Harriett Springer. Scholastic Book Services, N.Y., 1979. 32 p.

Compares sharks with fish and with each other. Makes the subject of shark identification clear and comprehensible for the novice of any age.

Soule, Gardner. Remarkable Creatures of the Sea. G.P. Putnam's Sons, N.Y., 1975. 96 p.

Deals with true stories of the odd, the enormous, and the mysterious. Leaves the reader disbelieving, yet wanting to hear from "fish stories." Presents the fish of the very deep, the largest invertebrates, fish that fish, tracks on the bottom, and over half a dozen others. Few black and white photographs, but fortunately, the writing is so descriptive that it allows the reader to visualize what is not pictured.

Stevenson, Robert L. Treasure Island. Dutton, NY, 1977. 161 p.

A classic written about 100 years ago. Still lures readers with its tale of intrigue, hidden treasure and brave and honest young men. Continues to entrance readers as they, like Jim Hawkins, are lured to the sea and to adventure.

Straker, Joan Ann. Animals that Live in the Sea. National Geographic Society, 1978. 32 p.

Designed to impress and awe the reader with vivid pictures and information. Pictures common fish and colorful tropical beauties, including a humorous clownfish and various anemones. A small amount of interesting factual information accompanies each full-color photograph.

Thompson, Donnis Stark. Mystery of the Alaska Fish Site. Illustrated by Jack Gaughan, Criterion Books, N.Y., 1966. 143 p. Out of print (check your libraries).

Todd, a Chicago boy, has traveled to Alaska to fish with his cousin Buff for the summer. Todd is exhausted by all the preparatory work for setting nets and is baffled by the special vocabulary that goes with it. The two boys work as men and can't understand the rude, unfriendly behavior of their neighbor, Vimri. The two unravel an international gun smuggling ring that Vimri is involved with. Gives valuable background information about salmon fishing in an adventure and mystery that appeals to even a reluctant reader.

Todd, Joan Marlow and Robert Sietsema (editors). I Must Go Down to the Seas Again. Hart Publishing Company, Inc., N.Y., 1978. 63 p.

Passages of nautical poetry and prose are matched with fine engravings to catalog mankind's fascination with the sea.

Tunis, Edwin. Oars, Sails and Steam. Illustrated by author. Thos. Crowell, NY, 1952. 79 p.

A meticulously crafted book with detailed line drawings of ships of the past 10,000 years. Includes a history of ships that combines facts with humor and charm. A book to read slowly and return to again for reference and for pure pleasure.

Turner, Philip. Sea Peril. Illustrated by W.T. Mars. Cleveland World, 1968. 224 p.

David, Arthur and Peter discover an old punt (a long, narrow, flat-bottom boat) in the town junkyard and restore it so they can put out to sea.

Van Doren, Charles. Growing Up on a Clipper Ship. Illustrated by Robert Patterson. Hill & Wang, NY, 1964. 127 p.

One of Van Doren's "Growing Up" series about 16-year-old Nat Dawson in the 1850s when he was the youngest sailor on the Rebecca.

Ware, Kay. Let's Read About Fishes. Webster Publishing Co., 1957. 32 p.

Introduces fish in general and a wide variety of unusual fish species with color and black and white stylized illustrations.

Wei, Tu. Landing the Giant Sturgeon. Illustrated by the author. Foreign Language Press, Peking, 1976. n. pages.

Beautiful Chinese watercolor illustrations of a big fish story. Simply story line intertwined with a few quotes from Chairman Mao and other communists.

Wheeler, Alwyne. Fishes. Usborne Publishing Ltd., London, 1982. 24 p.

Superb descriptions of fish and their adaptations in gorgeous color drawings. Heavily illustrated with a simple story line.

Wise, William. Monsters of the Deep. Illustrated by Ben F. Stahl. G.P. Putnam's Sons, 1975. 63 p.

Introduces some of the "most dangerous and mysterious monsters" of the deep to the young reader. Includes different kinds of sharks, octopus, squid, whale, sawfish, moray eel, and stingray. Discusses the development of diving equipment. Exceptional illustrations are the strength of this book.

Woods, Loren P. Fishes. Illustrated by Tom Dolan. Follett Publishing Co., Chicago, 1969. 32 p.

A simple overview of fish that discusses evolution, distribution and ecology. Covers anatomy and information about tropical and cold water fishes with brilliant colored illustrations.

Wyss, Max Albert. Magic of the Sea. Viking Press, 1968. 86 p.

Combines superb photographs of the sea and its inhabitants with prose and poetry to make a moving essay about people and the sea. Influence of the oceans on human cultures is impressively developed in this handsome book.

Zim, Herbert. The Waves. Illustrated by Rene Martin. Wm. Morrow & Co., 1967. 63 p.

Explains water in motion, better known as waves. Discusses technical studies of waves and their significance. Also mentions tidal waves, their past destructiveness, and current warning devices used by the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Illustrated with pencil drawings.

Zim, Herbert S. and Lucretia Krantz. Commercial Fishing. Illustrated by Lee J. Ames. Wm. Morrow, NY, 1973. 64 p.

Zim, Herbert S. and Hurst H. Shoemaker. Fishes. Illustrated by James Gordon Irving. Golden Press, NY, 1955, 160 p.

A guide to the more common of the world's fishes, both salt water and fresh with full color illustrations and classifications listed for easy identification.

Herbert S. Zim. Sharks. Illustrated by Stephen Howe. Wm. Morrow, NY, 1966. 64 p.

Describes different kinds of sharks, their importance, and the danger they present to people.
